VIRTUAL EXHIBITION

EXHIBITION NOTE

There comes a point each year when people begin to say the same thing:

"It finally feels like spring."

What is remarkable, however, is that everyone seems to recognise its arrival differently. Some notice the changing quality of light. Others hear birds returning, see windows opening once again, or observe familiar streets becoming busier. For some, the first signs of spring are less visible, arriving instead through a personal shift in mood, outlook, or memory.

The works in Spring Through My Eyes reflect this breadth of experience.

Some artists respond to the physical characteristics of the season through colour, growth, weather, gardens, and changing landscapes. Others approach spring as a deeply personal experience, shaped by memory, relationships, healing, expectation, or transformation. In these works, spring becomes more than a point in the calendar; it becomes a marker of time within a person's own life.

As viewers move through the exhibition, no single interpretation takes precedence. An intimate interior can express the spirit of spring as powerfully as a landscape in full bloom. Likewise, an abstract composition may communicate renewal just as convincingly as a representational scene.

Perhaps this is what gives the exhibition its lasting resonance. Every artwork begins from a different perspective, yet each invites the same reflection:

What does spring look like through your own eyes?

The answers are thoughtful, deeply personal, and remarkably diverse.
